Support for COVID-19 Research Through the Symptom Surveys

Bio: Sarah LaRocca is a research scientist on the Demography and Survey Science team at Facebook. She works on web surveys that inform decisions both within and outside Facebook. Sarah received her BS in environmental science from the University of North Carolina and her MS and PhD in environmental systems engineering from Johns Hopkins University. At Johns Hopkins, her research focused on risk and reliability analysis for critical infrastructure systems, particularly in the context of natural disasters and decision-making for public health. Prior to joining Facebook, she worked on survey research at The Messina Group, a political consulting firm in Washington, DC, and on the Hillary Clinton presidential campaign.
